

Jayna Nelson: Flutist/ Composer/ Producer

Bloom of Creation

“... playing that possesses a balanced logic and earthiness ...and intricately weaves her sound into the photo fabric of a composition.....stretching into each other’s musical space without creating a crowded sound....With The Bloom of Creation, Nelson has landscaped an organic milieu that is openly defined..” - Cheryl K. Symister-Masterson - Chronogram

“...a balance of the emotive and cognitive aspects of the thought process.... conveys a feeling of close interaction and an unhindered transition from lyrical moments...to the more brusque.....Nelson and her group achieved something special....the product of these great minds is no longer lost, but a document preserved for the ages....As Nelson writes in the liner notes: "The creative process is never a solo journey. Bloom of Creation is the collaboration of rare souls conversing in the universal language of music."

Jakob Baekgaard allaboutjazz.com

“...another unrecognized gem....amazing flute and piano interplay with equally strong rhythm section work..... all five members of this solid quintet engage each other and play slow-burning restraint, solos unfolding carefully and consistently intense interaction.”

Bruce Lee Gallanter - Downtown Music Gallery

Jayna Nelson was born in Lincoln, Nebraska and began to study piano as soon as she could reach the keyboard. At age 9 she began to study the flute as well and by age 17 had won both the Baldwin Junior Keyboard award and the National Music Teachers' Association Competition. She graduated from the University of Toronto in Flute Performance where she studied with Louis Moyse, Andre Jaunet and Jeanne Baxtresser. For the next two years, she served on the faculty at University of Toronto teaching chamber music. There she also premiered a work by Mario Davidovsky: Synchronism #1 for Flute & Electronic Tape under the direction of the composer. She also was principal flutist with the Union College Orchestra, the Wesleyan College Orchestra, Opera Omaha Orchestra and Symphony Canada.

In 1983 she attended the Banff Centre Jazz program headed by Dave Holland and studied and performed with Anthony Braxton, Don Thompson, Dave Liebman, John Abercrombie and Freddie Stone.

Jayna moved to New York in 1989. She continues to work as a Classical and Jazz performer, producer, composer, arranger and educator. She has designed and implemented integrated arts curriculum for New York area schools and summer camps and has lectured and given seminars at the University of Nebraska, University of Georgia, Bard College and the Julliard school of music and also has maintained a private teaching studio for over 20 yrs. She has performed in the Toronto DuMaurier, NYC Panasonic, NYC JVC Jazz festivals, Woodstock Maverick Concert series, and the Kleinert/James Gallery, Woodstock, NY.

Jayna also has been a flute technician and consultant for Anthony Braxton, Dave Liebman, Joe Giardullo, Jeanne Baxtresser, Joannie Maddon, Carlos Malta, Hermeto Pascoal, and James Moody.
